Please note that these are doctor recommendations that come from my client base. I do not know all of these doctors personally. You should set up an interview to see if you will like to work with them in the months after your baby's birth. Many people change pediatricians frequently, attempting to find someone that is philosophically cohesive with their views. Vaccines and their schedule seems to be the most controversial item. This discussion can often be delayed for the first few months after a relationship is established and you may have better negotiation power.
